What do your website and your website visitor have in common? Their individuality.

No website is exactly like the other, the same applies to the people who visit them. Taking guard of imperfectnesses of others is very important and today it is an ever growing issue on the web.

Not every website visitor has the same premises:

- a good eye
- being able to use a mouse to navigate through the website
- the right browser

Because there are people that

- have defective sight
- cannot or do not want to use a mouse
- cannot or do not want to use a current or popular browser or maybe even use a text browser,

the internet may have diverse barriers - in this case the universal usage of the website and it's content is often impared. That is why it is important to build a website accessible to the standards of the W3C.org.

We can offer you the realization of your barrier free Website. The content of your website is accessible for all visitors and your website will be better found in search engines.
